Synergy engineered a fully equipped 20ft Outdoor Mess Unit designed to provide a comfortable and functional break area for personnel working in remote and industrial environments.

This unit is not a full-scale commercial food mess, but a welfare-focused solution that allows workers to sit, relax, and access tea, coffee, and light refreshment facilities during operational hours.

Built from a modified ISO shipping container, it is ideal for construction sites, oil & gas projects, marine operations, and remote work camps where dedicated rest facilities are required.

KEY FEATURES:

- Comfortable seating area for workers
- Tea & coffee preparation station
- Refrigerator for food and beverages
- Microwave / oven for light heating
- Storage cabinets and drawers
- Air conditioning system
- Electrical outlets and lighting system
- Insulated and durable steel container structure

Synergy developed a practical Outdoor Mess Unit featuring seating arrangements, a refreshment station, storage cabinets, refrigerator, microwave/oven, kettle area, and air conditioning system.

The layout is optimized to ensure comfort, ease of use, and efficient space utilization, allowing personnel to relax during breaks in a controlled environment.

THE CHALLENGE:

Remote industrial sites often lack proper rest and welfare areas for workers to take breaks, prepare hot drinks, and store refreshments safely.

The challenge was to design a compact, durable, and comfortable unit that integrates seating, basic catering facilities, refrigeration, and climate control within a 20ft container footprint.

THE RESULT:

The completed Outdoor Mess Unit provides a clean, comfortable, and climate-controlled welfare space for personnel in remote and industrial environments.

It significantly improves worker welfare by offering a dedicated break area for rest, refreshments, and relaxation, enhancing productivity and site morale.
