Overview

Oxygen, water, and food are essential for life—and of these, the lack of oxygen is most life-threatening. Dive injuries such as lung barotrauma, decompression illness, and near drowning significantly impair a diver's ability to metabolize oxygen.

Providing emergency oxygen at near 100% concentration can minimize tissue damage caused by oxygen deprivation, significantly improving an injured diver's response to further medical care.

In remote diving locations, immediate access to medical help may not be possible. The DAN Rescue Pak Extended Care Plus with integrated first aid kit offers approximately 52 minutes of oxygen supply, making it a critical component in the management of diving-related emergencies such as decompression illness or near drowning.

Note: Proper training is required to administer oxygen safely and effectively.
